Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 10-week, 1000 kcal energy deficit diet on the body composition and physical fitness of 10 obese women. The subjects were divided into two groups: a control group and an exercise group. The control group was instructed to maintain their current level of physical activity, while the exercise group was instructed to engage in 150 minutes of moderate-intensity exercise per week. The results of the study showed that the exercise group experienced a significant decrease in body weight, body fat percentage, and waist circumference, while the control group did not. The exercise group also experienced a significant increase in physical fitness, as measured by a 10-minute step test, while the control group did not. The results of this study suggest that a 10-week, 1000 kcal energy deficit diet, combined with 150 minutes of moderate-intensity exercise per week, is an effective intervention for improving body composition and physical fitness in obese women.
